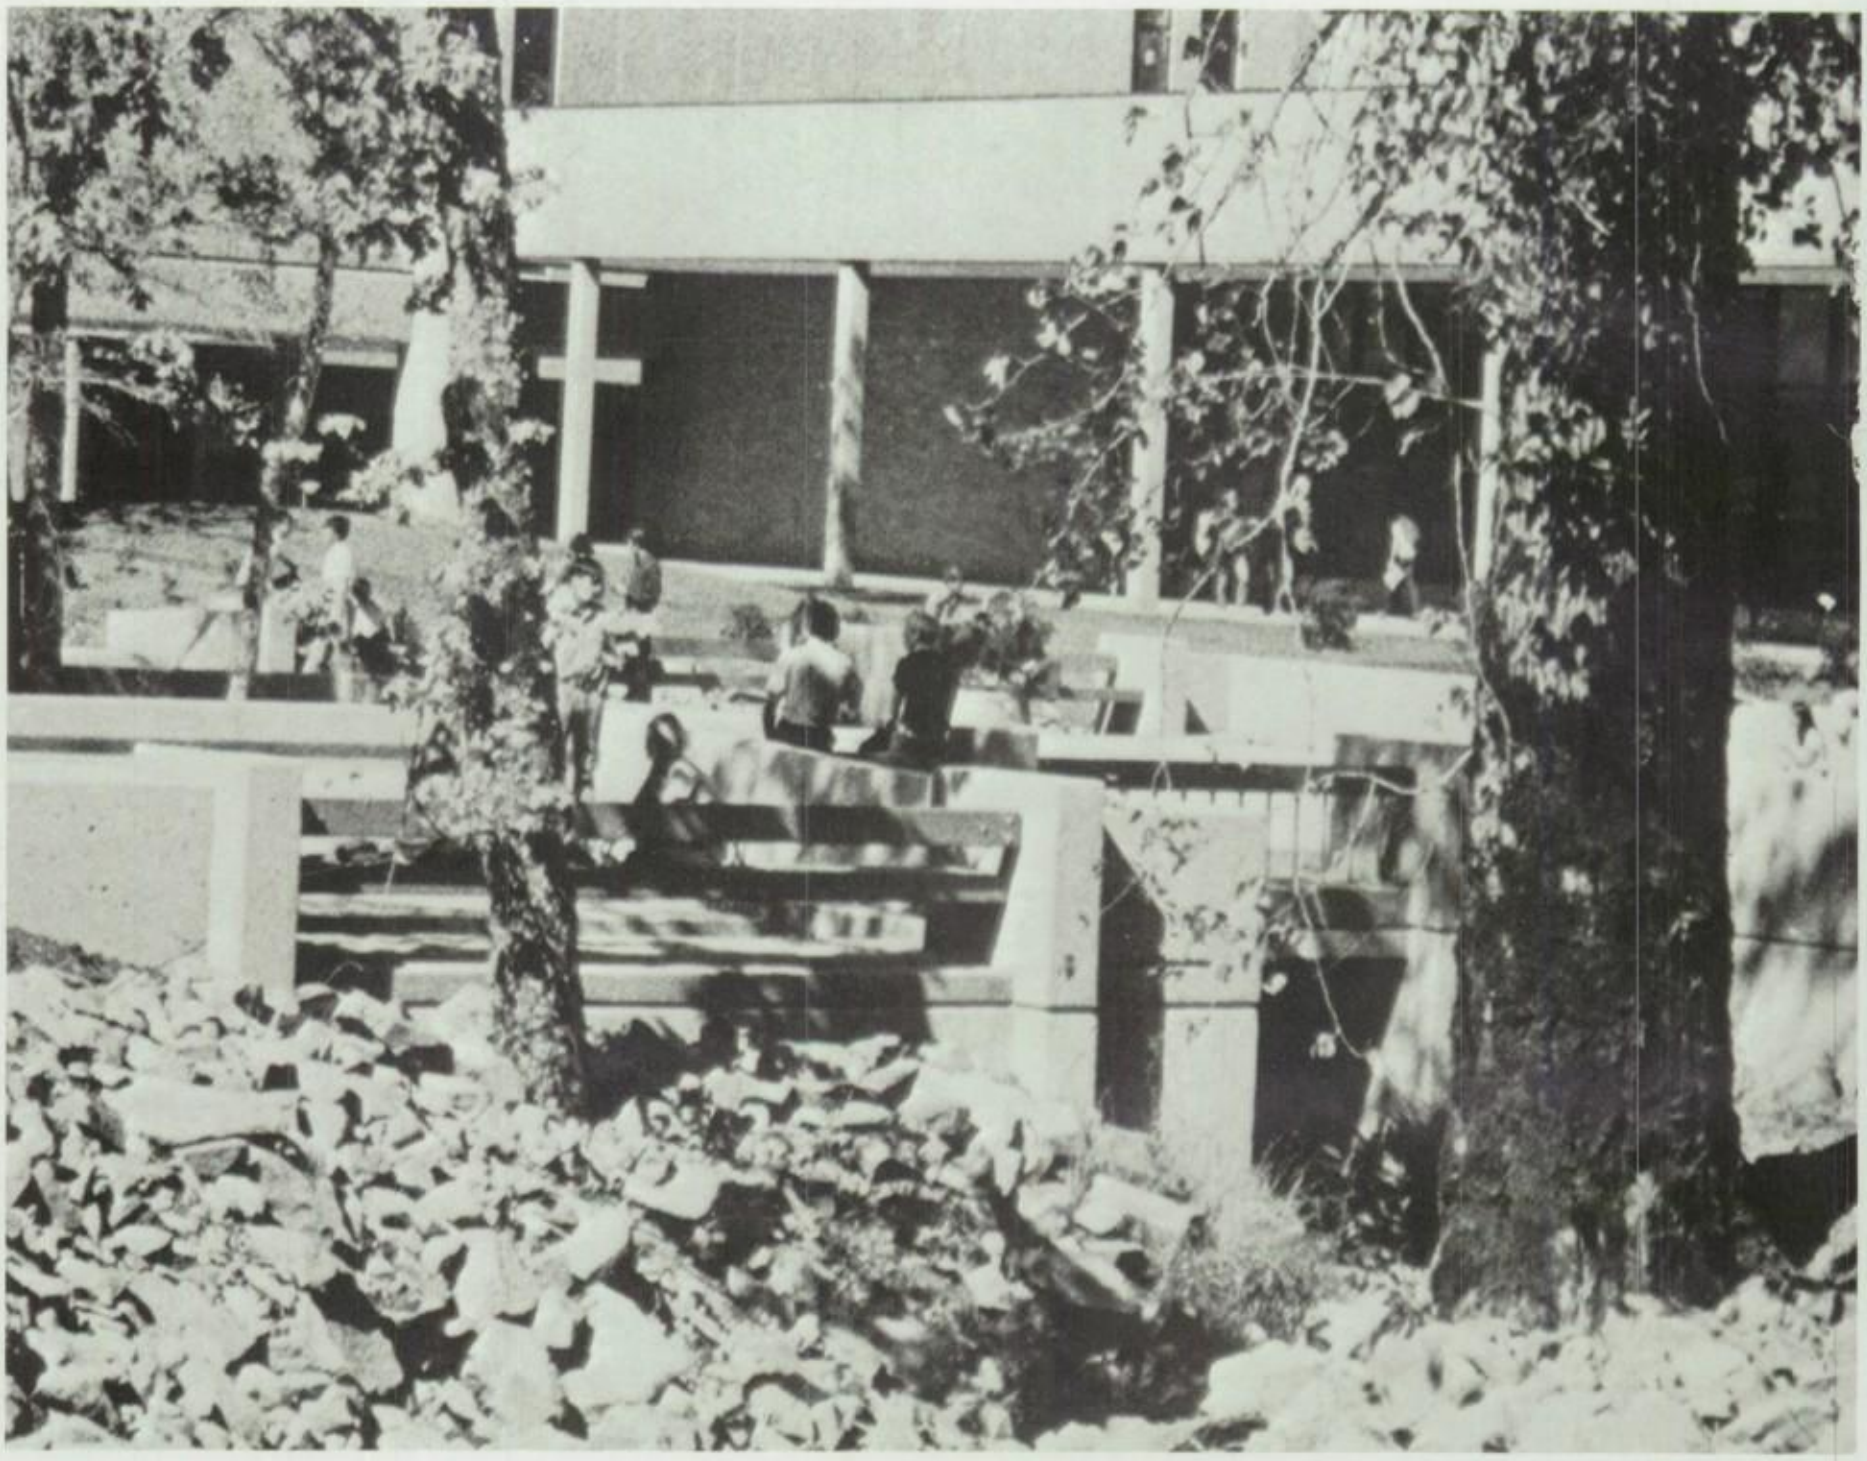
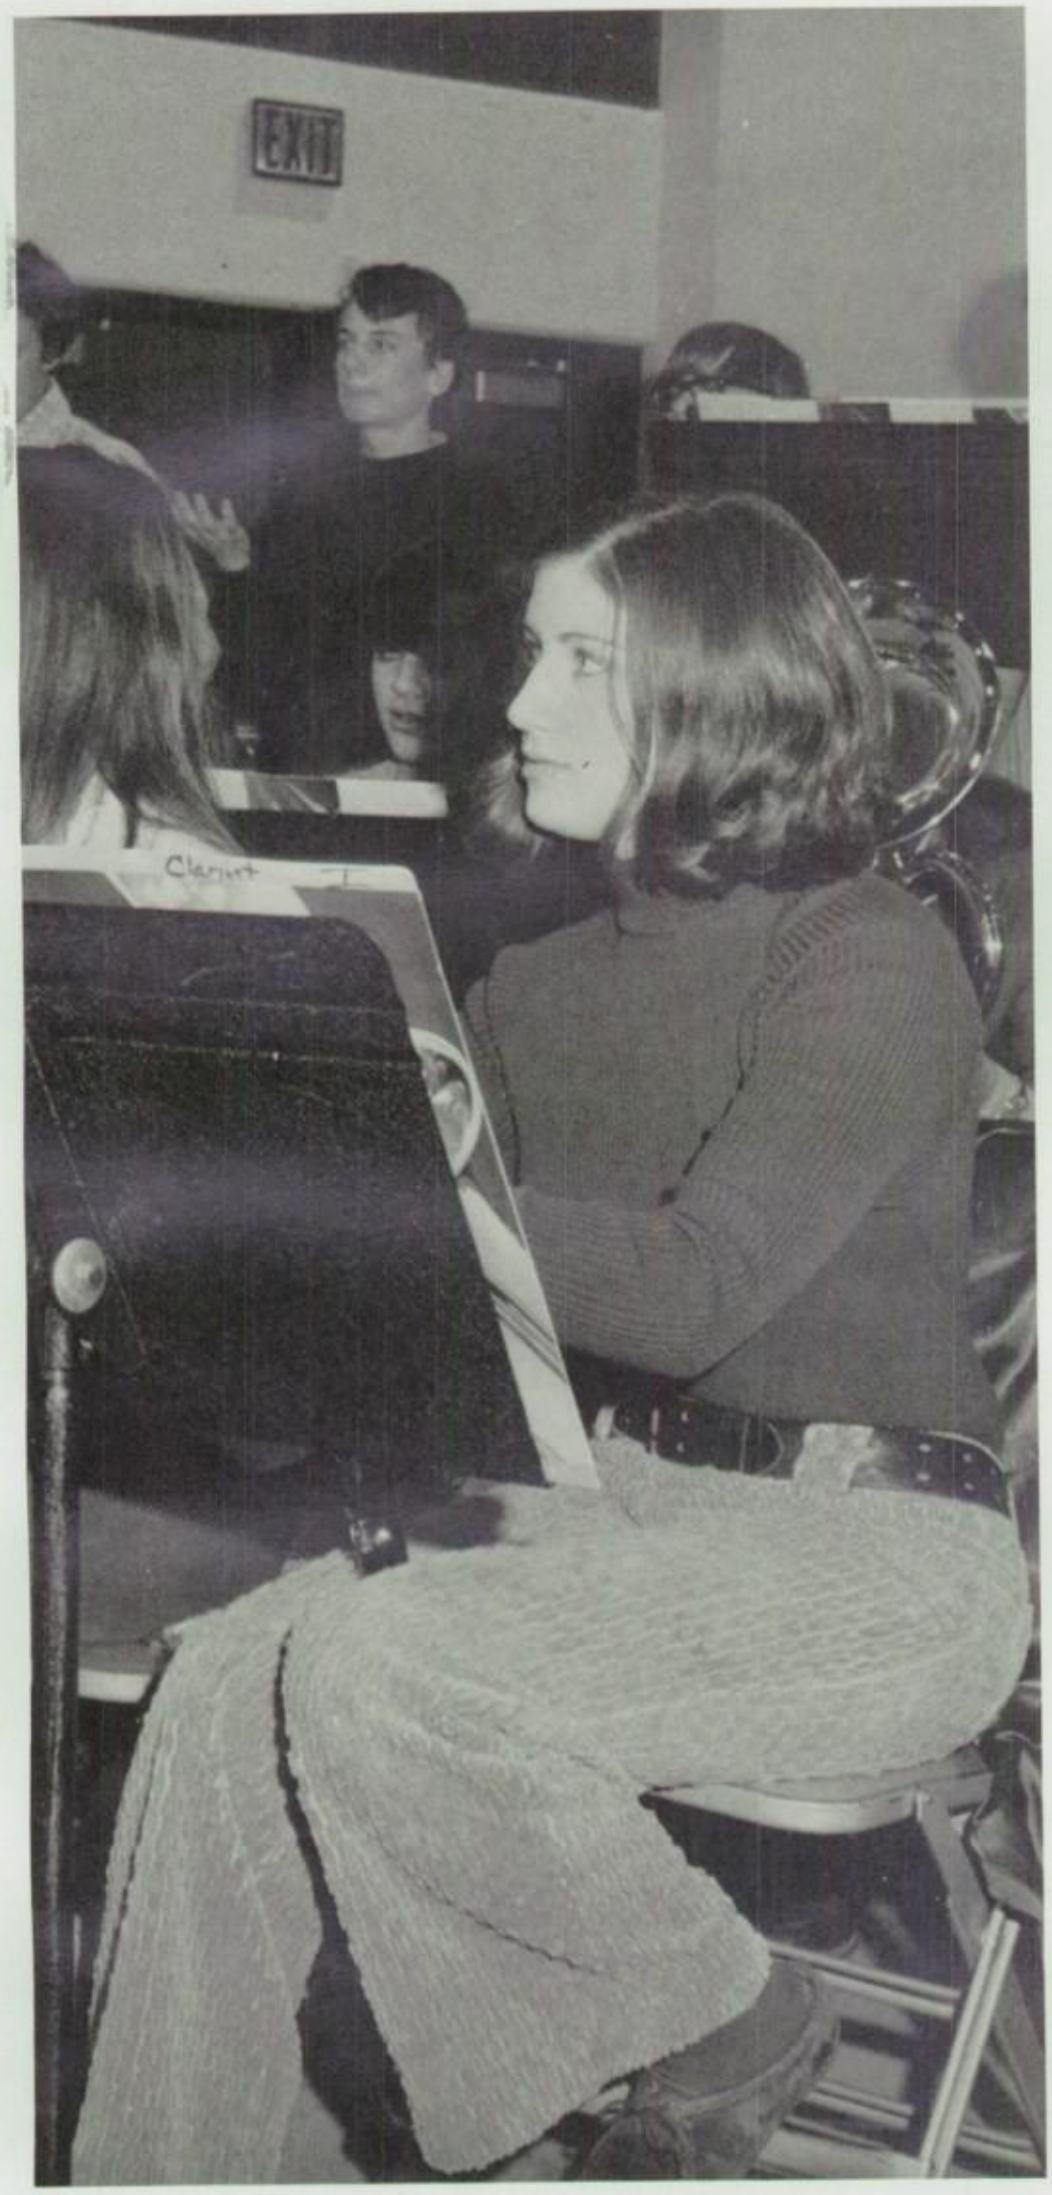
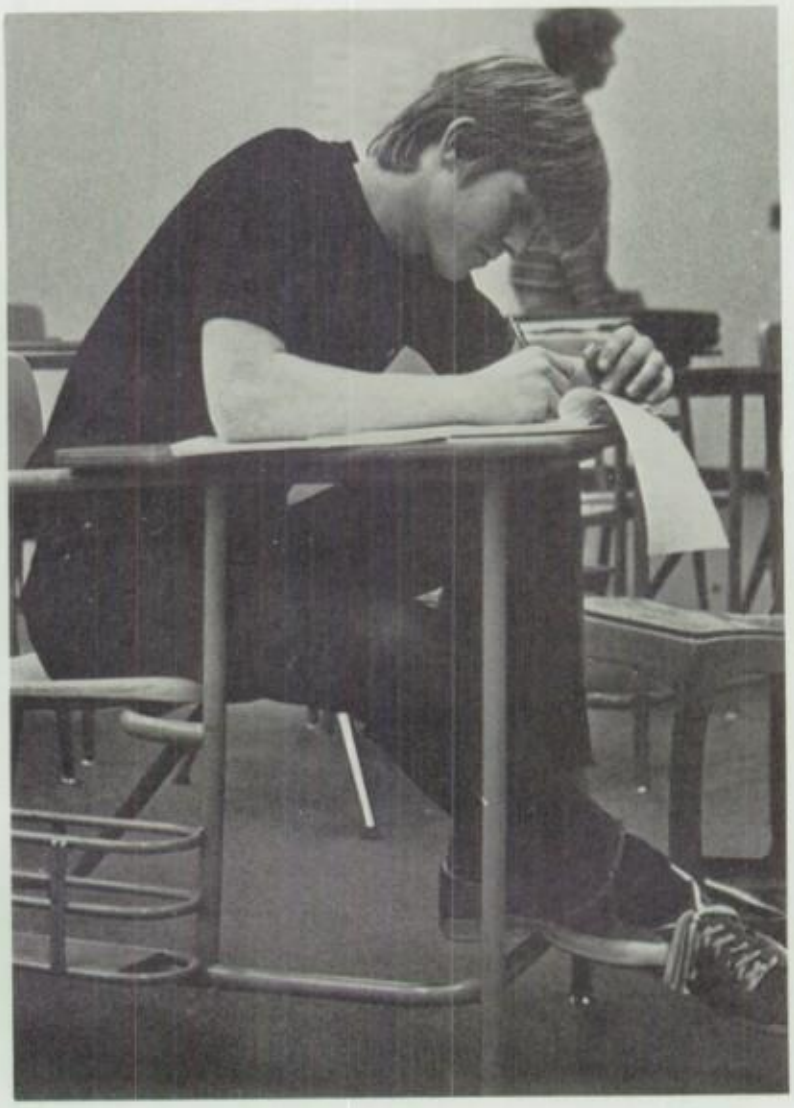
Only just the start.



Thetford House

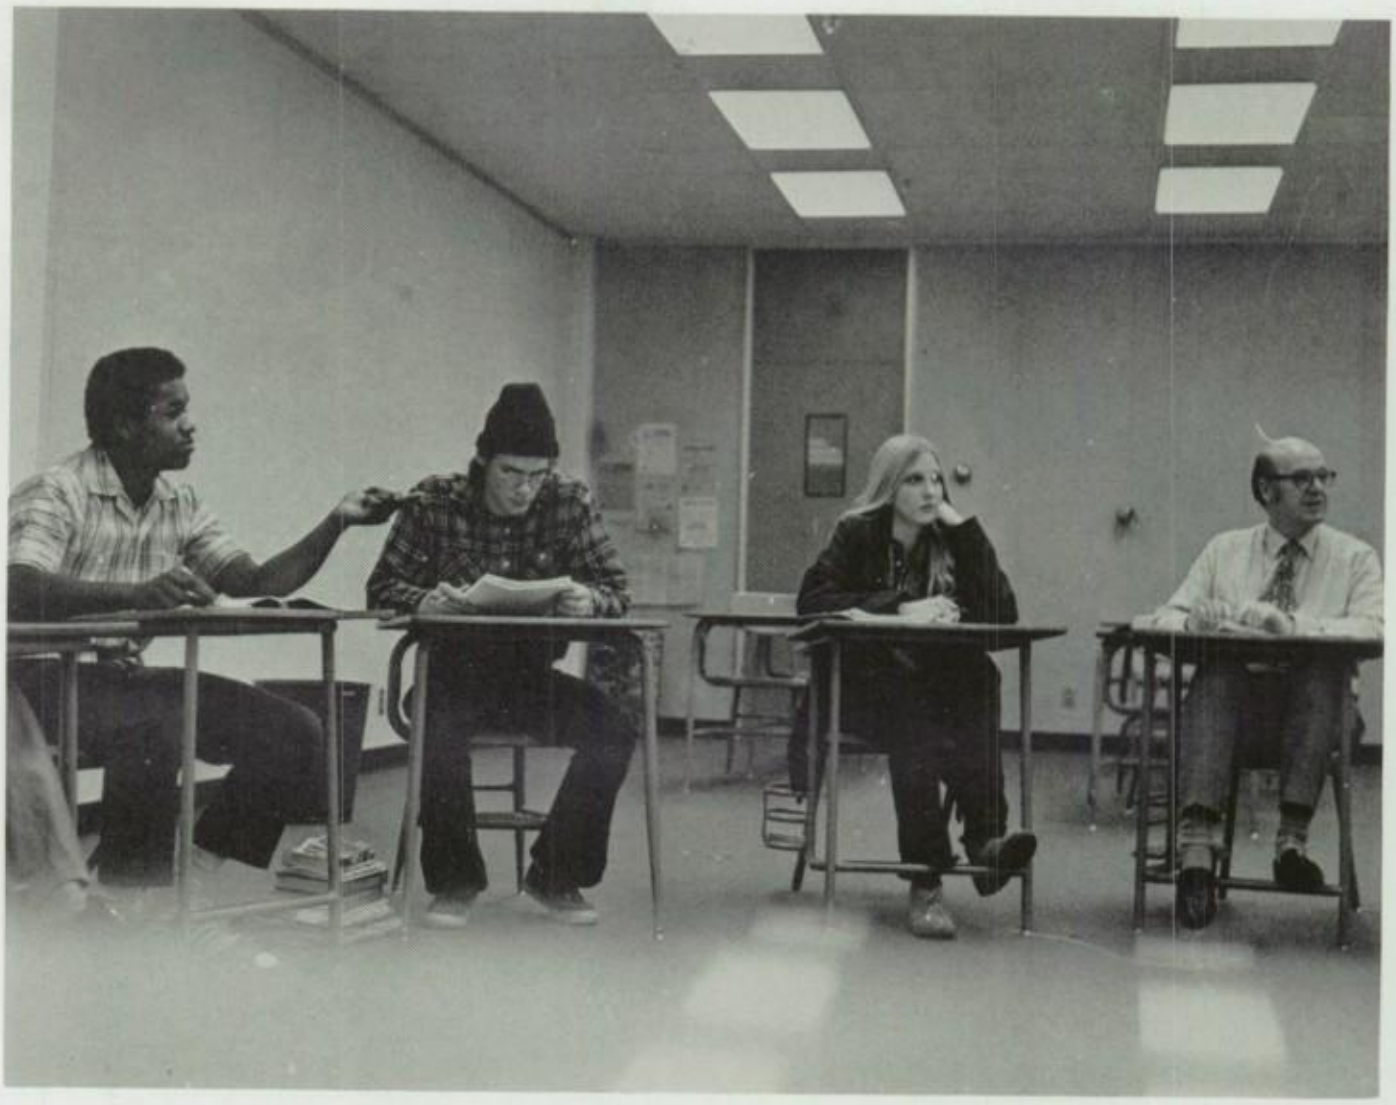


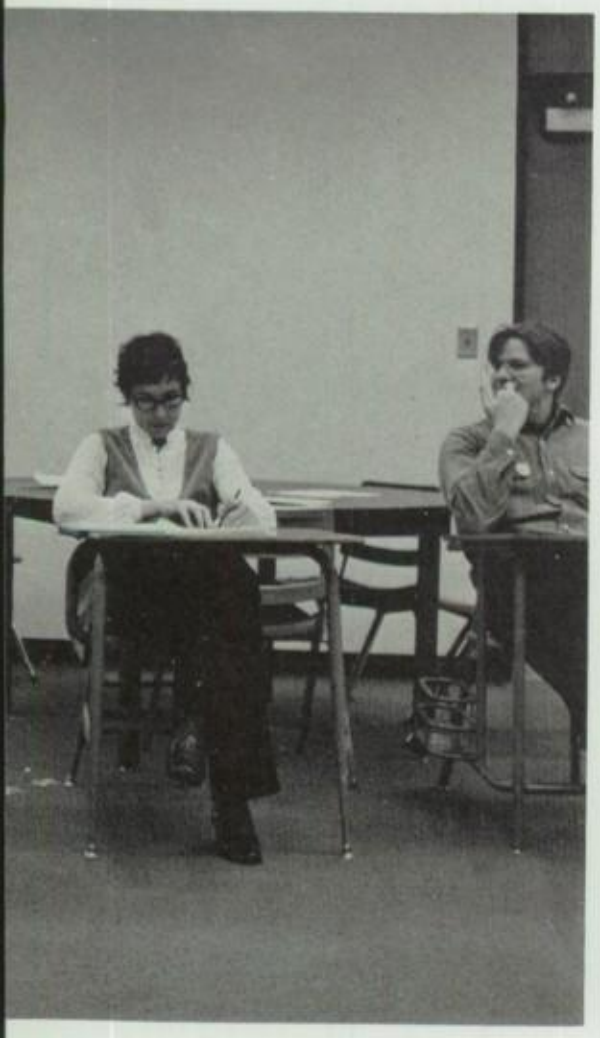


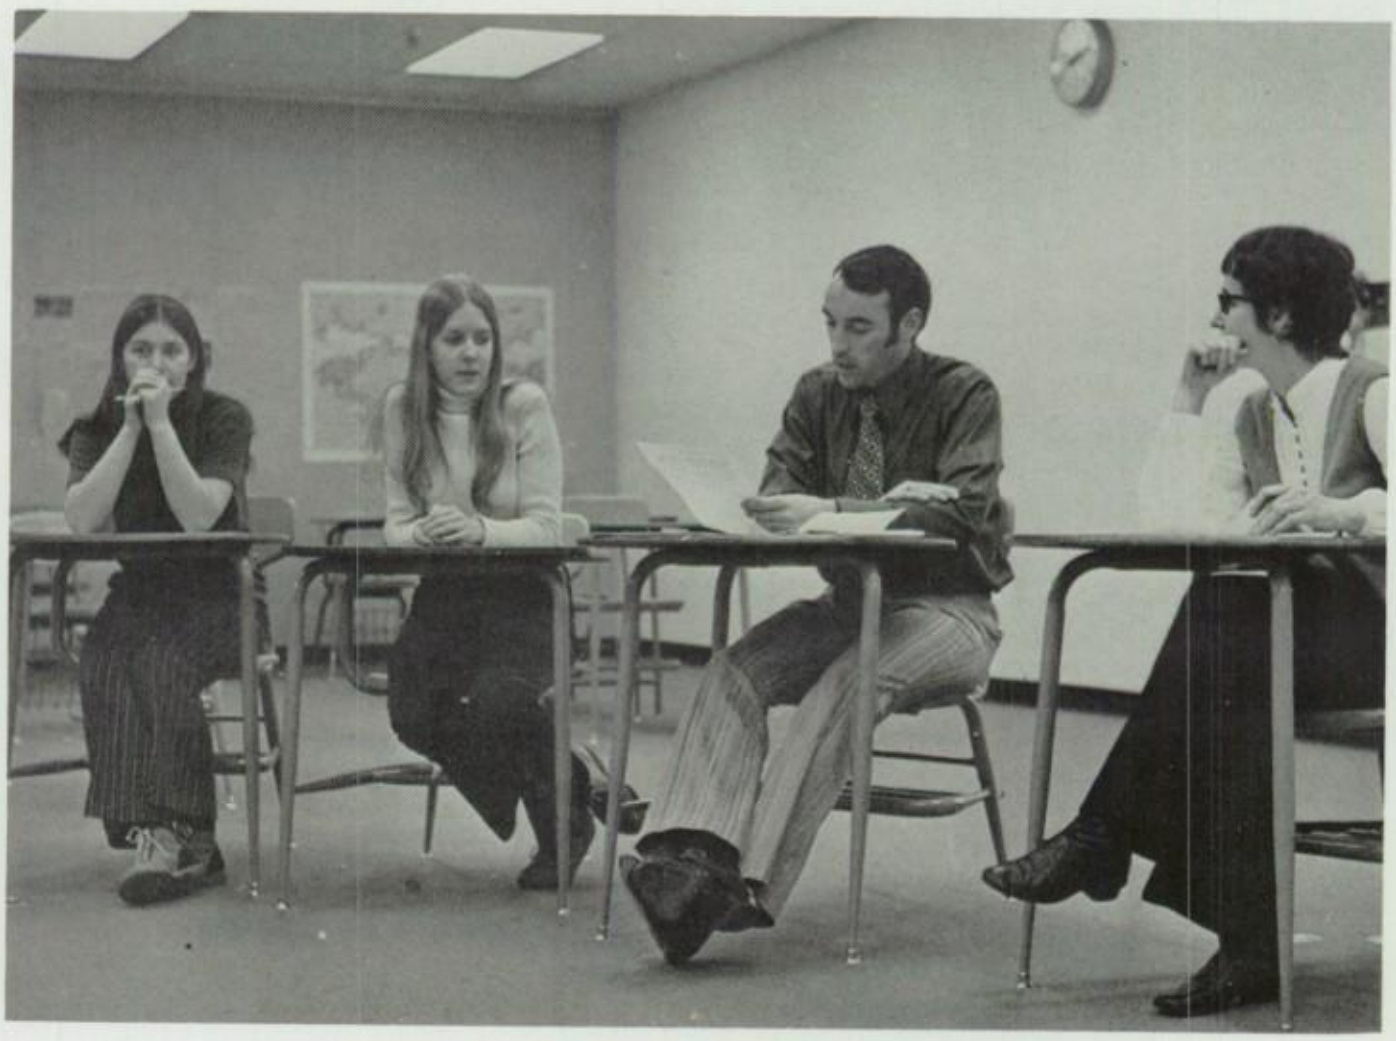
In the experience of this beginning, take time to reflect on the world around you.

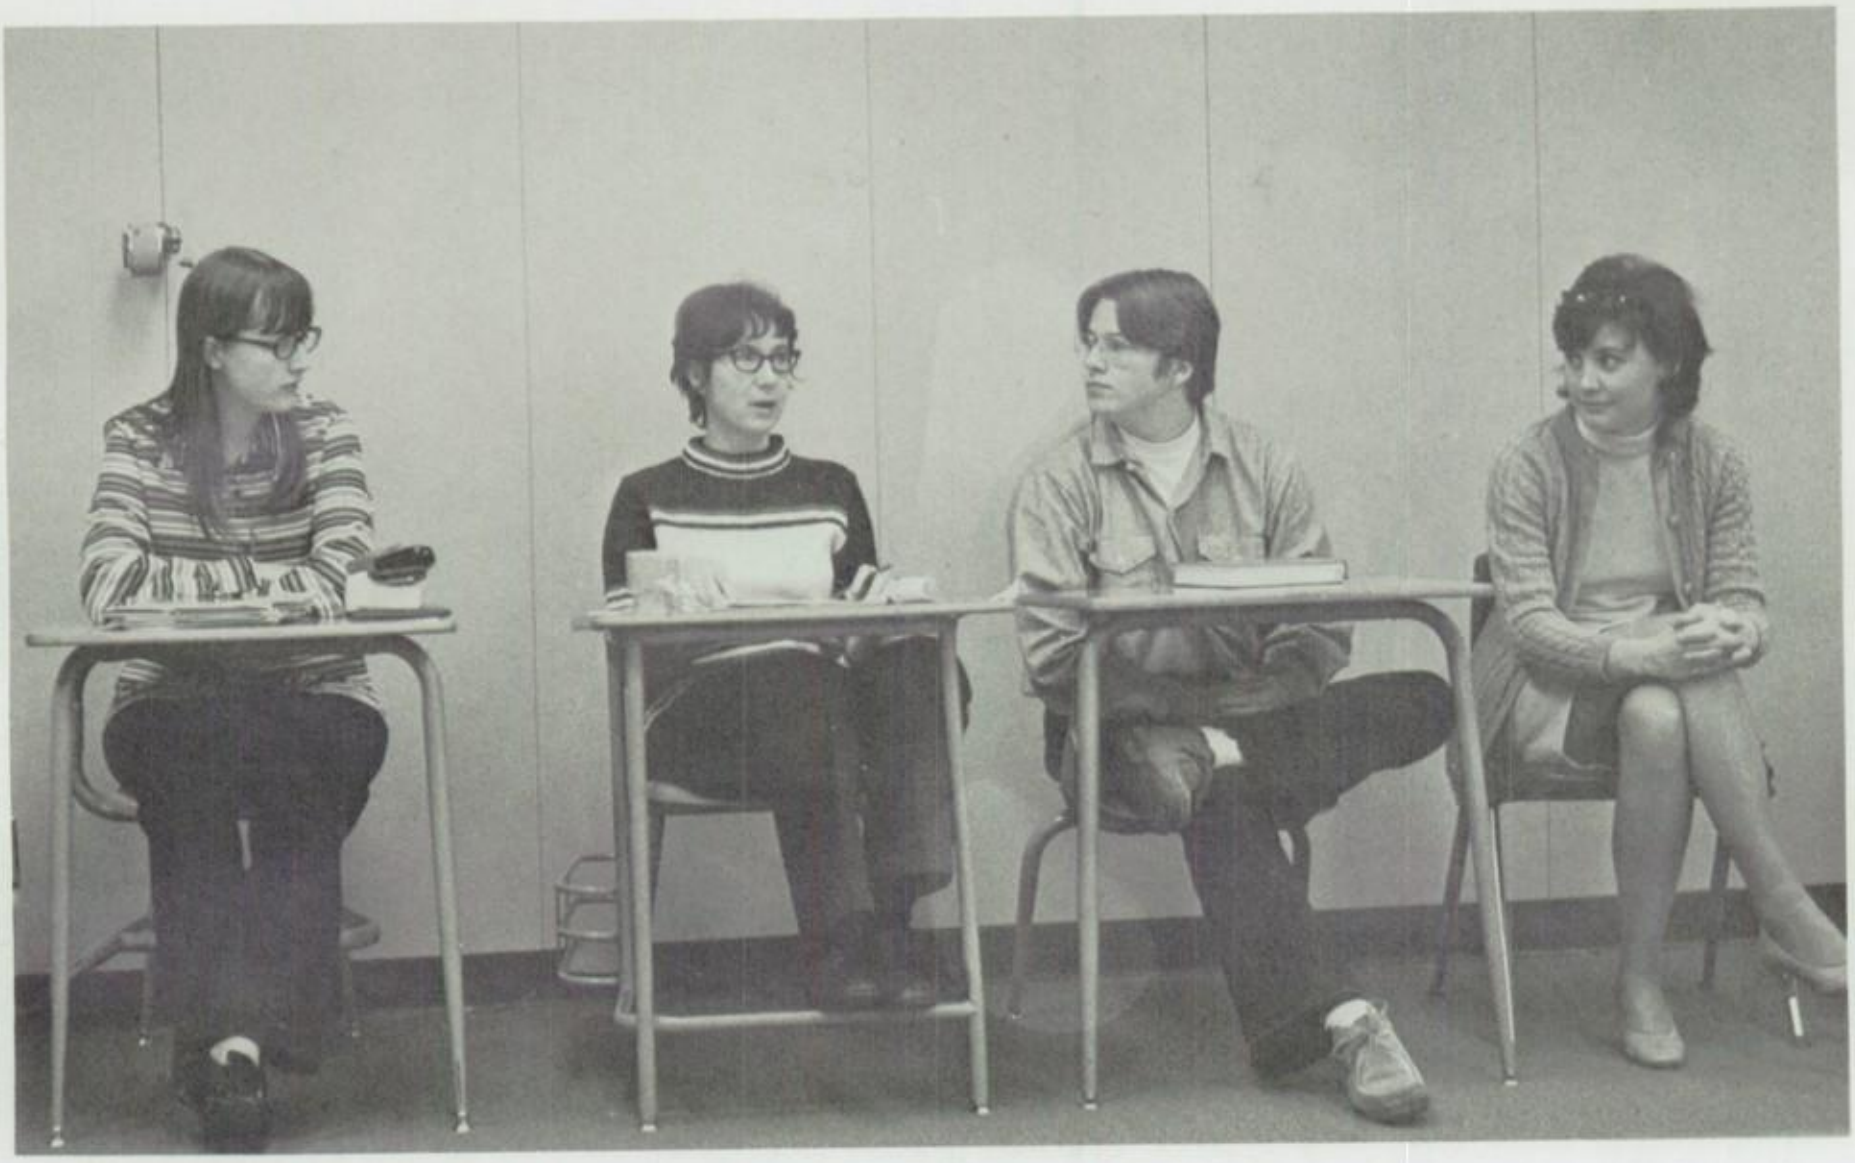
Thetford House Council

Faculty, students, and parents combined to make decisions concerning Crescent Valley. (above) Gerald Limbrick, first semester chairman of the Thetford House Council, makes a point to Phil Scharff, Lynne Shoemaker, and Mr. Thetford. (below) Teachers Jerry Colonna and Penny Dolan discuss business with students Tim Almgren, Cindy Hunt and Karen Campbell.









Advisor-Advisee Program Functions Within Houses

The Advisor-Advisee program was started at the beginning of the year in the hope of providing the students and faculty with a place to air views and discuss problems relating to the school. Special interests were often topics in the groups, as the meetings were not restricted to a rigorous agenda.

Hollister Does Research, Development and Evaluation

There is need in all schools to have someone responsible for the research, development and evaluation functions of the school. This includes the evaluation of curricula, teachers, administrators, counselors and anyone who has a specific task to perform in the schools. Through frequent evaluation of programs it can be determined in which areas we are failing and attempt to correct them before they have lingered around for years. The same is true with the teaching staff and administration. Through evaluation, weaknesses can be detected and corrected before they become a fixed pattern. Evaluation is particularly critical in a new school such as CVHS since the parents, according to our parents' survey, expect good things to happen here at CVHS. We have made a good start in this direction the past year in helping teachers write performance objectives and assisting them in other ways to be more effective.

We have also evaluated team teaching in the humanities area and conducted a parents' survey to discover their feelings toward this school. Students evaluated the teachers and the teachers evaluated themselves in other instruments. A student attitude scale was developed and given to all students. The results of the Iowa Tests of Education Development and the Gates Reading Survey were distributed to the teachers for each of their advisees. Also distributed to the teachers was an instrument which measured their attitude toward learning and knowledge. Instruments were developed to evaluate the administration, house leaders and counselors. The Iowa Tests of Educational Development were given again near the end of the year to measure the students' progress. It is hoped that next year more can be done to make CVHS an outstanding school.

CVHS and CHS - Competitors, Yet Friends

Office Area Is Cheerful and Efficient

(Right) Bob Payne, Principal, enjoys a Raider basketball game. Mr. Payne worked closely with faculty, students, and the community in the initiation of many new programs at Crescent Valley. (Below Right) Gloria Carter, secretary to Mr. Payne, keeps things running smoothly in the Main Office. A ready smile and a concern for the welfare of the students and faculty was a big help this past year. (Below) "Good Morning, Crescent Valley High School," was receptionist Judy Flynn's trademark this year. (Above) Marcia Herndon, attendance and Student Body Funds Secretary, totals figures from Student Body accounts. All made the office a most pleasant place to be at Crescent Valley.

Thetford Humanities Combines Subjects

Thetford Humanities teachers started off with a somewhat traditional program. The object of the teaching was to try and relate English and History subject matter.

Second semester, a new system was tried. This included the organization of the "team" teaching program.

(right) Don Prechtel, an artist specializing in Western History, displays a sword that he owns. His lecture coincided with the Western Arts and Literature option. Electronics Valuable Course

Electronics is a course that involves both Science and Industrial Arts. The students study about and work on all types of electronic equipment. Lew Williams teaches half day at both CHS and CVHS. Bill Ford was hired for 2nd semester as a full time teacher.

Science and Math Personalize Classes

Science and math tended to be more personalized than many students had experienced in previous years. The courses offered were basically the same, but new methods of teaching and learning were being experimented with. Thetford House science included Physics, Biology, and Human Biology. Math courses were Geometry, Algebra I and II, College Algebra, and Trigonometry.

Business Classes Are Popular

Mrs. Marge Sutherland controlled the business area with a stern but efficient hand. Aided by Mrs. Glenn, she taught classes in beginning and advanced typing as well as the more technical applied skills. The popularity of these courses was depicted by the great throngs of students who filled the classrooms. Competative incentive was also added to the course to stimulate superior quality work.

Henderson's Classes Center on Design And Painting

Can we go outside and sketch? is a familiar request in Mrs. Henderson's art classes. Her students work primarily in the Fine Arts of painting, printmaking, design, and drawing. Mrs. Henderson spends two periods a day supervising teacher aides from CVHS in the Elementary Schools. This is a very popular way for students to gain experience working with children. When there is a banquet to be decorated for, Mrs. Henderson usually is head of the group.

Crescent Crier Strives For Accurate News

The Crescent Crier was under a very loose format this year. The staff of 20 had no permanent editor. Work effort was concentrated on producing a paper every few weeks. Some of the jobs were page editor, reporters, and advertising salesmen. These advertisements helped finance the publication.

The Revolutionary Staff would like to thank Kevin Costello and Ken Wicks of the Crier for some of the pictures that appear in this annual.

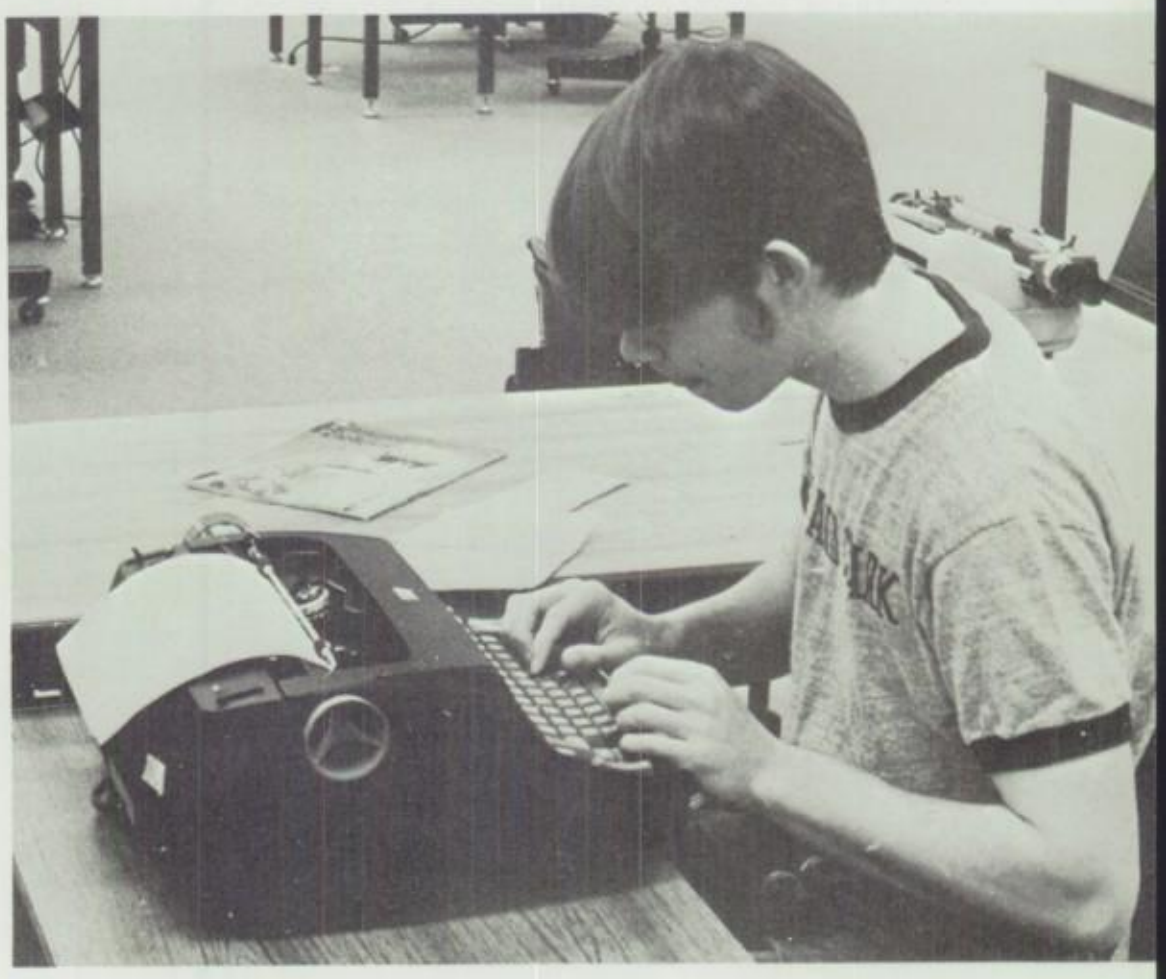
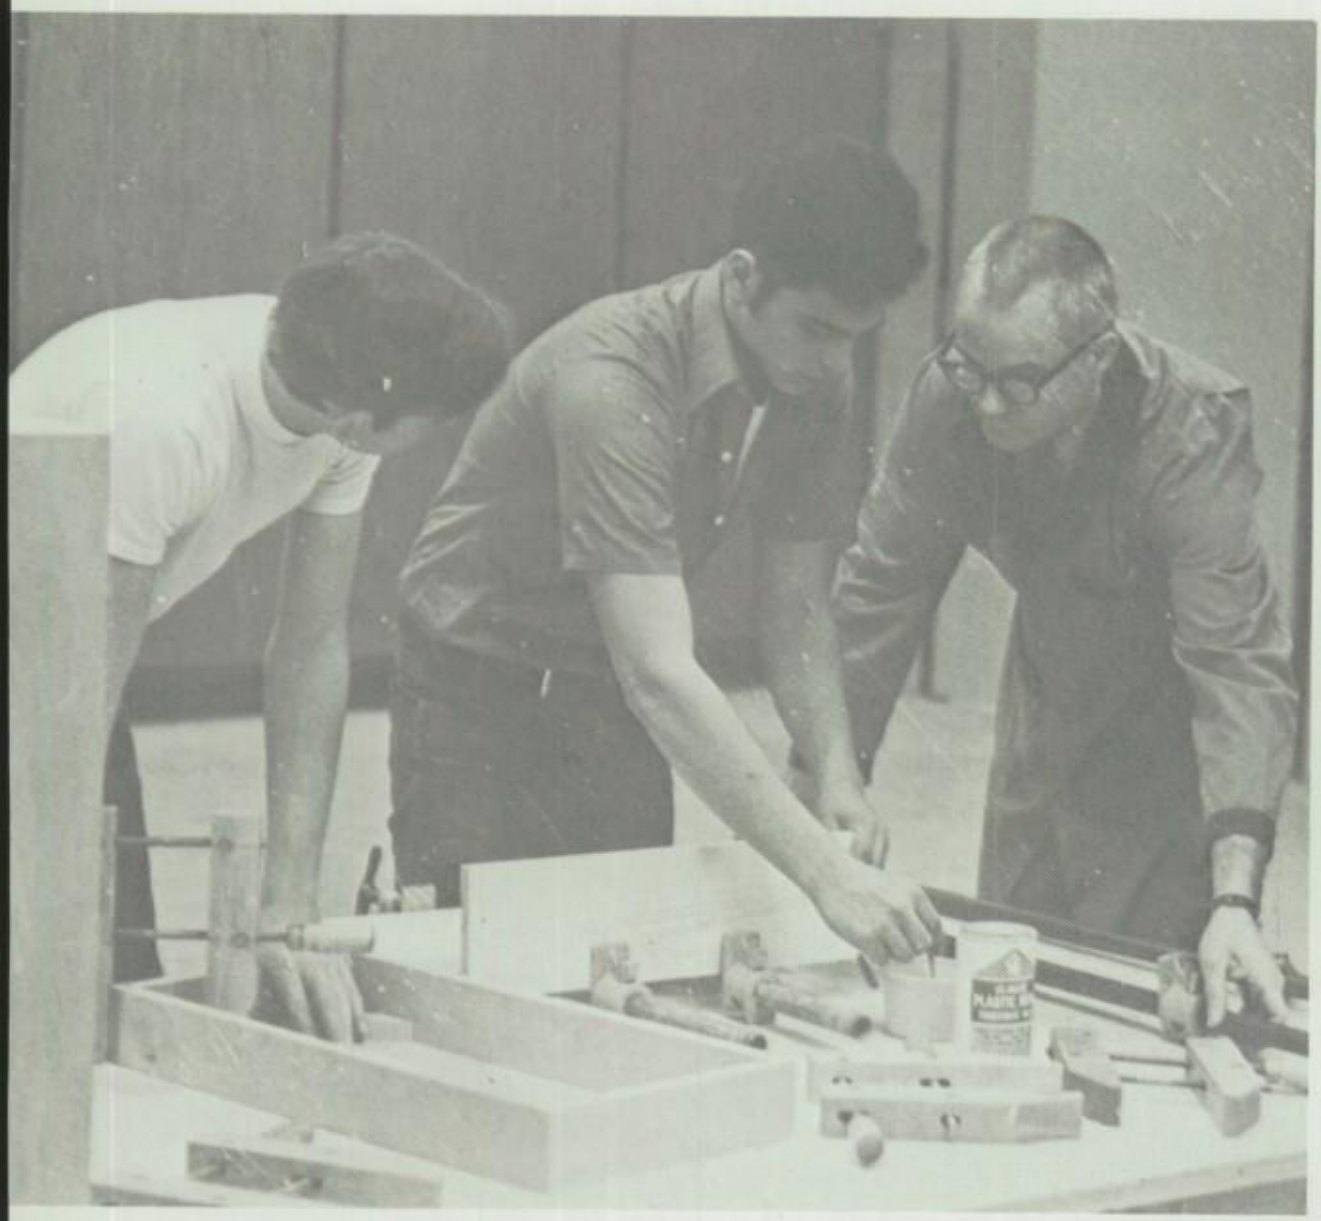
(Top) Steve Rush and Bob Glass work on organizing the student index. This job included the making of 500 3 by 5 cards listing each student's name on them, and recording the page number that particular student was on. (Above) Carol Goddard, editor of the Revolutionary, inserts a completed page into a mailing envelope. (This was a very rare occurance for the staff this year.) Wizard typist, Dale Oliver, (right) taps out captions for the sports section. Dale was a valuable asset to the staff, as he did all of the typing.

Revolutionary Staff Races Against Time to Put Out First CVHS Annual

The 1971-72 Revolutionary staff did all the things that efficient staffs are not supposed to do, such as missing deadlines, losing pictures and negatives, etc. Towards the final deadline time, however, things began happening in the room with the pink door. Pages were being finished at an amazing rate, much to the astonishment of the eight-member staff. A lot of hard work was done to complete the 160 page annual for spring delivery.





Wagner and Honey Stress Skills

The woodshop area was busy constructing many different projects, ranging from dog houses to expensive looking cabinets. Both boys and girls learned how to operate power machinery and work together.

The Child Development class was organized by Jeanette Wagner. Also known as the "Raider Tots" nursery, this class was one where the girls have a chance to instruct and help the children. Both the girls and the kids would agree that the class was a success.

The curriculum in P.E. revolved around three week courses this year. Students were able to sign up for the area they wished to participate in. Some of them were basketball, archery, weight training, badminton, volleyball and "rhythms."

French and German Classes Learn Cultures

In French and German this year, students not only learned the language, but also picked up information on the customs and culture of the countries. German students presented several skits in German and a folk dance during X period.

Crescent Valley Band Promotes Spirit at Basketball Games

The band program at CVHS had a small turnout, as did the orchestra and choir. The Concert Band had approximately 35 members this year. Most of their players were incorporated into the Pep Band. This particular group gave the most performances, appearing regularly at the home basketball games.

ABOVE: Dr. Clarence Kron, Superintendent of Schools, carries on the busy schedule of operating 19 schools in the Corvallis School District. Dr. Kron was instrumental in planning a facility at Crescent Valley which looks toward the future in education. BELOW: Dr. Larry Tripp, Chairman of the School Board this past year presides over a Board meeting. Dr. Tripp, as well as Mr. Willard A. Hamlin, Mrs. Irene Cheldelin (MIDDLE) Mr. H. David Smith and Dr. James E. Oldfield (LOWER LEFT) spent many hours necessary to represent the patrons of the community in the operation of the Corvallis schools. They, as well as past Board members, Dr. J. Ritchie Cowan and Mrs. Frances S. Gallagher were instrumental in supporting the need for a second high school in Corvallis. The students, faculty and community recognize the tremendous amount of time, effort and criticism which comes with this unpaid position. We at Crescent Valley High School salute them for their efforts.

"... Believe in Yourself"

The Raiders started the season with a revolutionary rip by beating the Class A Champions, the Santiam Wolverines. Next, the Raiders breezed through a good game with Creswell. It seemed as though the immortal words of Coach Gary Ritchie, "Believe in yourself," were paying off in Raider victories. The defense went wild against South Albany and didn't let up when they traveled south to Lost River.

The Toledo Boomers gave the Raiders a scare, but the offense was unstoppable and came out with a win. The next game was Reedsport, and the offense did it again with the help of Mark Doverspike, who picked up over 200 yards.

The game with Central was a game the team could have come up with, but as the coaches said, "We beat ourselves." Then at Siuslaw, the team did a good job, but fell short because of a poor defensive effort in the final minute of play. The last game with South Albany gave Crescent Valley a final 7-2 record, and showed the Raider's desire to stay on top.

Coach Dick Moon stood looking over the group of young men trying to make it to the top of the roster. He gave them a stern look and said, "I hate Albany." In a sense of awe, the players had the feeling they were going to win this game.

This was the feeling the J.V.'s had before each game. As some well know, the feeling was lost on the field. The team had a 0-8-1 record, but not all was in vain. The J.V.'s had some outstanding efforts by Charlie Denson, Brent Eggers, Scott Johnston, Todd Lincoln, Larry Abraham, Jay Carter, and Steve Lucker.

Crescent Valley's Cross Country team was thrust into tough Valley League competition in their debut season. Although the team win-loss record was not particularly impressive, many fine runners appeared this year.

The varsity team members had several standouts, including regional finisher Bob Kipper (opposite page, bottom). Kipper placed 6th in the district meet, and was 9th out of a field of 56 runners in the regional competition. Other varsity participants were Jack Meier (5) and Matteo Martignoni (23) pictured in the district meet at Bush Park in Salem (above left). Meier finished 47th, and Martignoni took 46th. The 1971 swimming workouts got underway in early September in order for the teams to be ready for competition against their first opponent North Salem.

The girl's team had an early advantage over the boys because more of their swimmers had competed before. The boys had another disadvantage because of the limited manpower on the squad. They started with five boys and by the end of the season, an astounding total of 13 had turned out.

The teams worked hard during the season, and had a good first year showing at district. Jody Robinson captured first place in the 50 yard freestyle with a time of 28.4 and second in the 100 yard freestyle in 103.0, making her eligible for State in both events. Jim Gell placed well in district with times of 56.2 in the 100 yard freestyle and 206.0 in the 200 yard freestyle.

The Raiders started off an exciting season with a win over Central of Monmouth, with Scott Fulton leading the way. As the season progressed, the team hit some rough spots. The first deficit was center Fulton, who dropped because of a leg injury. Then the tough Valley League competition set in for a bleak first half. In the second half of the season, the Raiders gritted their teeth, tightened their belts, and gave their opponents some competition. Proof was Steve Fulton's second high Valley League average of 17.0 points per game.

JV's Strengthened - Lack In Consistency

"Only if we hadn't let up, we might have taken it." This was often said by many JV rooters during the Raider's opening Junior Varsity season. Many times the junior Raiders had lost games in one quarter of play with turnovers. Coach Sutherland tried everything he could, but only managed a few triumphs. The team was led by Junior guard Ron Jeffrey (22). During the season, players were swapped back and forth between the sophomore and varsity teams. At the end of the season the standouts were Bob Kipper and Larry Abraham at guard, Mark Robinson, Paul Miller and Bob Glass.

Scrappy Sophs Grind Through Valley League

This year's sophomore team was really on the move, winning or losing. Although having fewer games than the JV or Varsity, their overall season record was better. Led by guards Brent Eggers (42) and Charlie Denson (40), Coach Byrd saw some scrappy ball playing, and the Valley League saw a lot of points dropped in. Other standouts were Kelly Picket, Rudy Hooven, Scott Sawtelle, Dave Meares, and Bob Glass, who was promoted to the JV squad.

Gymnasts Overcome Lack of Experience

The Raider Gymnasts showed the ability of becoming a team of winners, as they exhibited hard work, effort, and outstanding performances. Wrestlers Have Building Year

This year's season can not be adequately evaluated in terms of winning wrestling meets. The team was comprised of five juniors and ten sophomores. Consistent performers were juniors Jack Meier and Al Jones. Sophomores Galen Brown, Don Baumgartner, and Jim Anglemeier did the same in their weight classes. A lack of numbers hurt the entire team because there wasn't tough competition available in every weight class. This competition may be available next year if the expected additions from the junior highs materialize.

Raw Talent - Essence of Track 72

Due to the early deadlines of the Revolutionary, an accurate write-up on any spring sport would be pure speculation on the part of the staff. As can be seen by the pre-season pictures, we felt that a simple overview of each sport would be the coverage with regard to our deadline.

With the large turnout for track as far as the boys' team was concerned, coaches Ray Korb, Jerry Colonna, and Gary Ritchie had a lot to work with. Experience was lacking, as was the case all year. Even if the season was not successful in competition, there will be at least a large majority of physically and mentally mature students at Crescent Valley.

Girls' Tennis Thrives on Enthusiasm

When girls' tennis started at CVHS this spring the enthusiasm showed, but so did their inexperience. Twenty-five girls turned out at the start of practice, but only two had previous high school experience. The squad was cut to 14 female netters, with half of them comprising the junior varsity team. Jeannie Charbonneau and Carol Warren, both in their second year of Valley League competition, were key members of this year's team.

Crescent Valley's first annual "Raider Revival Week" was also instigated by the rally squad.

Bowlers Find Challenge

Bowling became a sideline sport for some students at CVHS. The club was originated through the initiative of Dale Oliver and Mrs. Blok.

The club suffered a setback due to conflicting fall sports. Out of the 10-15 who found time to participate, a lot of potential was discovered. Bob Hicks, Allan Neer, and Bill Casler were the outstanding rookies. The regulars consisted of Bob Donahue, 150 average, Trae Sibley, 149 average, Dale Oliver, 159 average. Even with a small number out, much excitement was found and the highlight of the season was the challenge from Corvallis High. Not only did the Raiders beat the Spartans, but they averaged a 267 pin total over CHS. Dale Oliver had high game with a 229 score.

Lettermen's Club Sells Concessions and Raider Decals

Forensics Team Competes in Oregon Tourneys

The Forensics team traveled to several speech tournaments during the year. There were four people who consistently participated in the meets. They were Craig Leman, Judy Lawyer, Bill Kirkham, and Mike Barnes. Steve Byrd advised the group.

Emphasis was on participating in the program and meeting and listening to others at the meets, not necessarily winning.

There's an advantage in going to a new school, and that's all the new equipment. In the sixth period Mass Media class taught by Steve Byrd, the students were given an opportunity to work in the school radio station and to telecast several home basketball games on video tape. There were also several movies produced through the year on a variety of topics. One responsibility the class took on the second semester was producing a 15 minute movie on how Crescent Valley has used its grant to evolve ecology in its classes.

In parallel to the Media class was the Audio Visual class headed by rookie Bill Ford. This class maintained their normal duties along with experimenting with the audio visual equipment.

(right) Scott Hildebrandt is shown broadcasting a sports show on KROC for a weekly Mass Media project. Students were required to write up their own 40 minute broadcast weekly. Computer Comes To CVHS

Starting in January, Crescent Valley was privileged to have the use of a computer. Students signed up for a computer time and did the work on their own. Mrs. John Williamson gave instruction in the use of the computer and this attracted many CVHS students plus some CHS students.

Chess Team Surprises Established Schools

The young Crescent Valley chess team ran over many teams of long standing enroute to a second place finish in the Valley League's Southern Division. The Raiders, advised by Penny Dolan and initiated by stalwart Bill Kirkham, finished a surprise second behind defending champion Corvallis High. The top five boards were Doug Hilderbrand, Steve Doubleday, Bob Ferguson, Mark Johnson, and Sal Rachele. The Raiders qualified the entire team for the state tournament.

Outdoor, Foreign Language Clubs Form in 71-72

The Foreign Language Club was one of the first service clubs organized at CVHS. The club, made up of German, French, Spanish, and some English speaking students, headed a clothing and food drive for migrant workers in Woodburn, and also served food at a fund raising dinner.

The Outdoor Club had no definite membership, but was open to anyone who wished to go along on one of the trips. Excursions included a ski trip to Bachelor, a bicycle outing, and a beach trip.

Wrestlers Host Touring Japanese Exchange Team

Crescent Valley's 1971-72 wrestling team had the opportunity to participate in a two day cultural exchange with the All-Star wrestling team from Japan. They presented a program Monday, January 31, that included Kendo fencing, folk dancing, sumo, and judo. These demonstrations were interspersed between the wrestling matches. A party was given in honor of the Japanese after the contest.

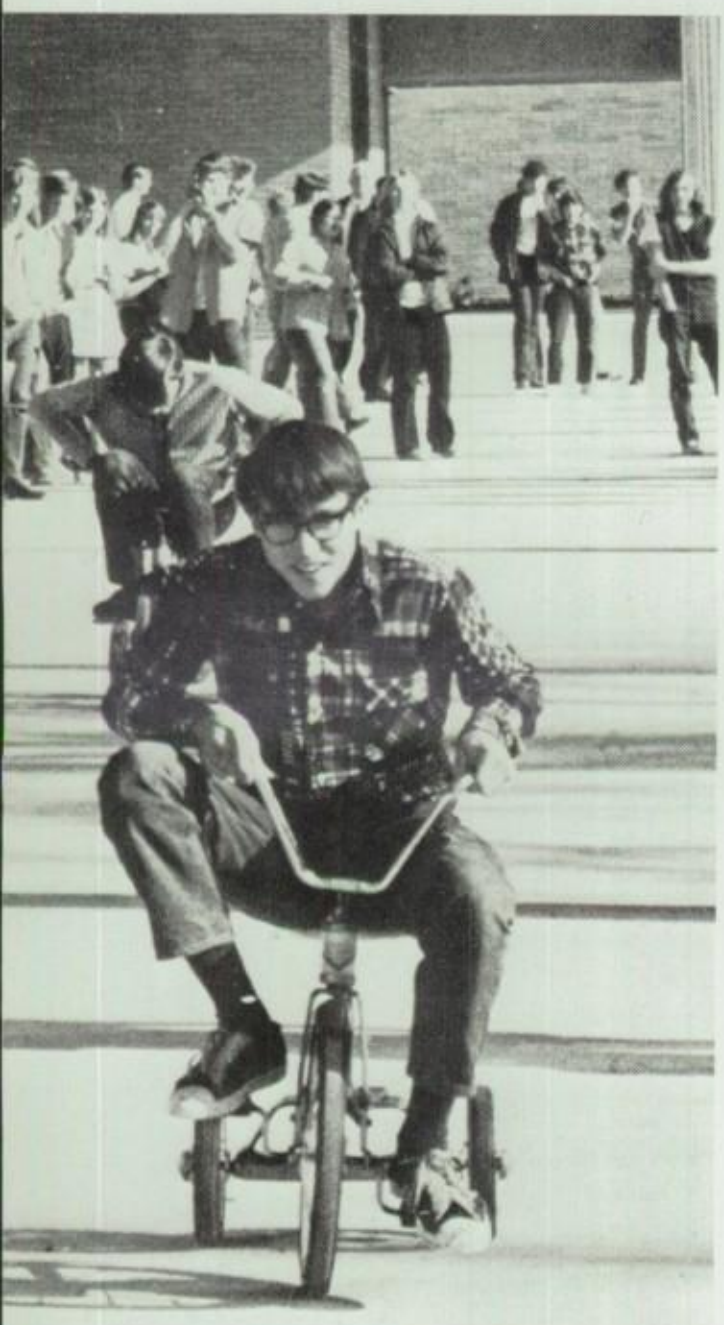
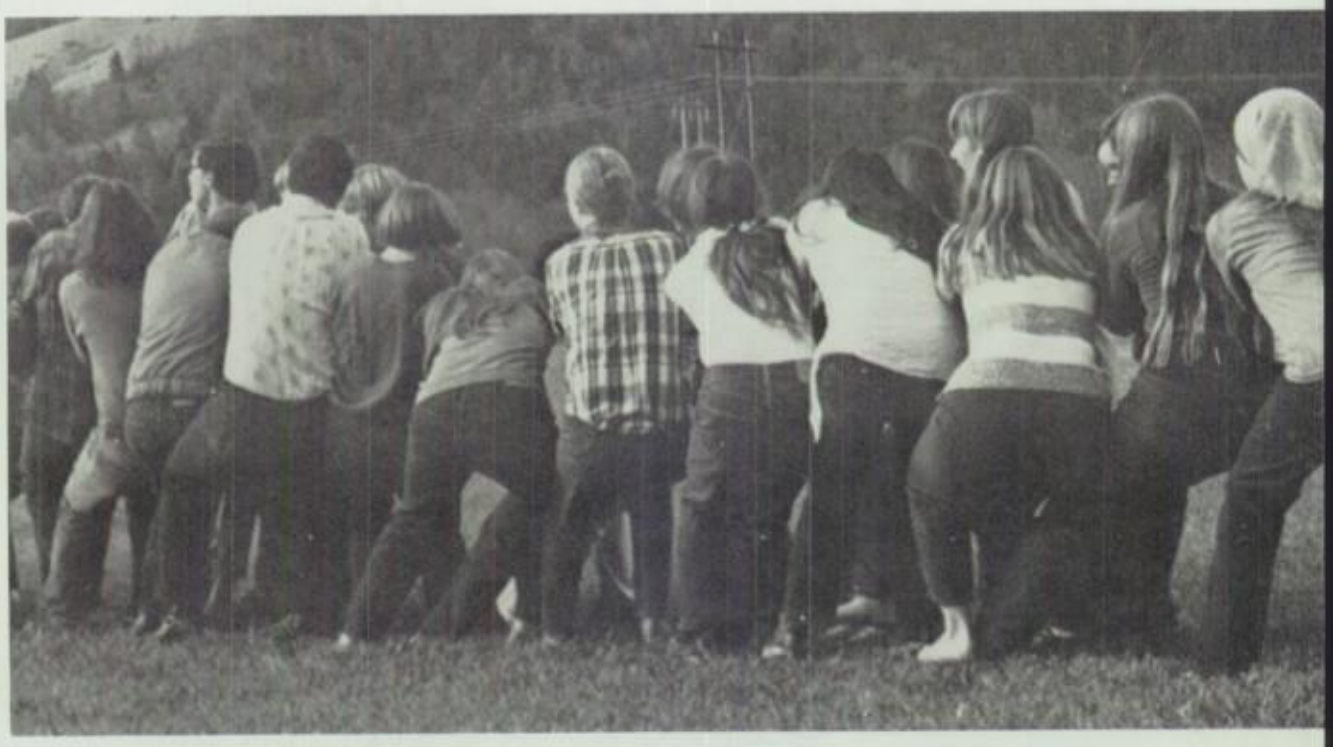
Juniors Down Sophs in Raider Revival Week

Raider Revival Week, an original idea thought up by the rally squad, took place on the week of February 7-11. The juniors swept all events during the week. Events were a tug-of-war, pie-eating contest, tricycle race around the court, and skits. The junior theme was "Round-'em-up Raiders" and the soph theme was "The Great Sophomore Rip-Off."





(opposite page, left) Tricycle racer, Roger Rictor, speeds down the straight-away. (middle) The junior skit depicts the "Round-'em-up" theme. (top) Sophomores tear off in their skit. (above) The somewhat muddy tug-of-war starts off Raider Revival Week activities.

"A Canticle for Leibowitz" Proves to be Thought Provoking Production

Crescent Valley's second production, "A Canticle for Leibowitz" was an unprecedented success. During the bows of the final performance, the cast received a standing ovation from an appreciative audience.

The play entailed many hours of work and research to authenticate interpretations by the actors. This included a Saturday field trip to the Mount Angel Abbey.

After weeks of rehearsals had taken place, supervised by Director Gary Christianson and his assistant, Molly Bonser, the play came to a dramtic but hectic conclusion. The opening night performance drew fervent praise from local critics.

The play covered a span of many centuries after a nuclear holocaust. The story centered around the Leibowitzian Abbey and its monks in their struggle to preserve the knowledge of books. The play sported no specific stars (except for the recurring character of Benjamin) but was an example of good team work.

(above) Cast members of "A Canticle for Leibowitz" trek along a walkway in the Mt. Angel Abbey near Salem. The tour through the Benedictine monestary was provided as an insight into the play. (left) Kathy McInelly, head of the make-up crew, applies a beard and age lines to Brian Stone's face. The girls in the make-up department did an excellent job in producing the desired effect for the stage. (opp. page, top left) The mutants and old men required extensive make-up, as shown by ancient monk, Greg Chaimov. His long locks had to be pinned under his cap and many old age lines were used. Susie Swanson provided the expert application. (opp. page, top right) Benjamin (Brian Stone) and Abbot Dom Paulo (Chuck Holst) meet in the desert to discuss the upcoming visit of the renowned scientist and scholar, Thon Taddeo. (opp. page, bottom) Abbot Arkos (Richard Rachele) administers discipline to Brother Francis (Dan Dailey).

Band and Choir Perform for Public

The Crescent Valley and Corvallis High School choirs were combined this year during performances. They sang for the Corvallis school system and community clubs. Most night performances were at CHS and had a wide range of songs that appealed to people of all ages. The Swing Choir consisted of eighteen select juniors and sophomores who sang mostly light and snappy songs. The Swing Choir participated in the March 16 Festival at Corvallis High.

"What the Band lacked in numbers, they made up for in enthusiasm!" This quote by Director, Ken Winther, typified the attitude of the Crescent Valley band. Their mode of performance varied, as they played at pep rallies and most home basketball games. The entire band was involved in a formal concert in the spring.

Principal's Council Policy Making Force

The Principal's Council was the major policy making force involving students, administrators, faculty and parents during the 1971-72 school year at Crescent Valley.

Every major issue of policy affecting the school was brought before the council and discussed openly. Depending upon the particular issue involved, the council acted as a decision-making body or advisory group to the Principal.

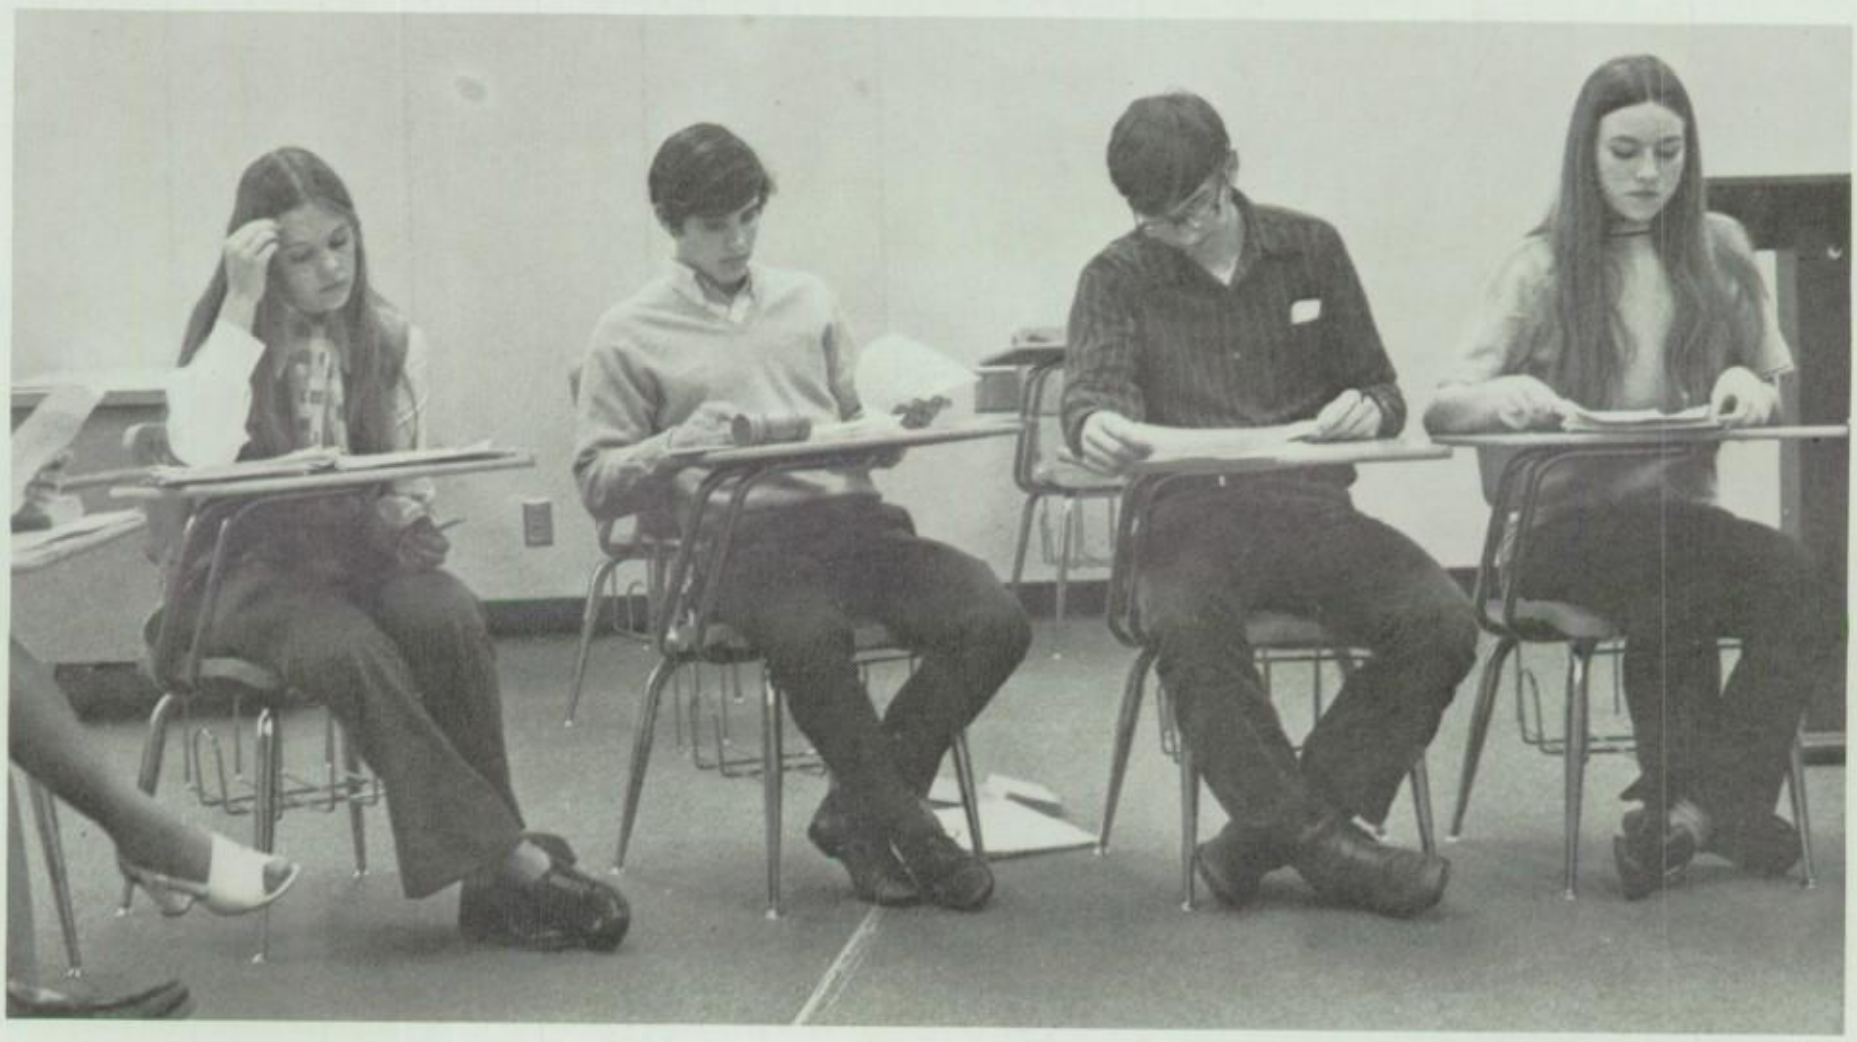
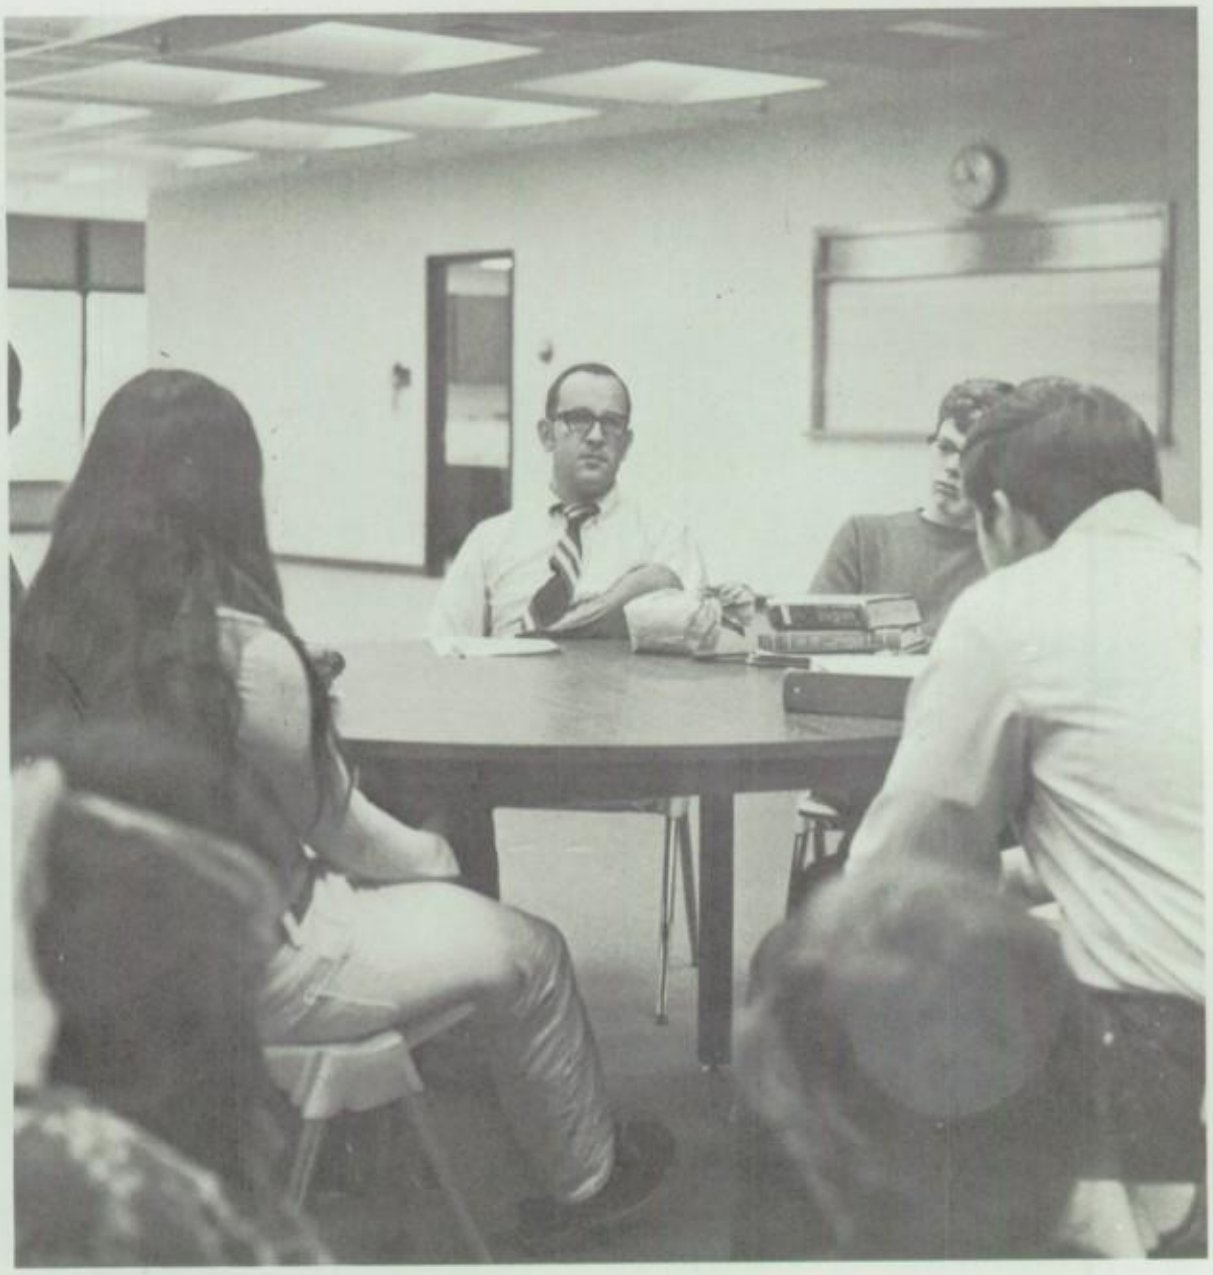
House Council Works for X Period

Thomas House Council representatives were chosen from Thomas advisee groups at the first and second semesters. The Council was instrumental in obtaining the "X" period for the student body.

(right) John Thomas discusses the policy affecting future dances at Crescent Valley. Sitting in on the meeting are Mrs. Thomas Frothingham (parent), and student representative Judy Lawyer. (below) Members of the house council go over the new regulations for dances. Marcia Gamble, Jeff Lyford (chairman), Jim Krawczyk, and Bobbie Eltzroth study the information.





Advisee Groups Communicate

The advisor-advisee program involved the school in an attempt to establish good communications between all the personnel at CVHS.

Each faculty member had approximately fifteen students in their group. Advisor groups were assigned at the beginning of school, and had fairly regular meetings throughout the year.

(right) Laurie Spongberg, "Try it, you'll like it!" (below) Barb Bolin, "I enjoyed myself very much and I'll miss the students when I have to leave."

Student Teaching At CVHS

This year at Crescent Valley over 70 student teachers gained experience within our walls. The student teachers felt they had been given valuable aid in their education despite frustrations. Having student teachers integrated within the classes also gave the teachers a new prospective at times. Many new techniques were tried by student teachers and later adopted into the regular curriculum. The most sound fact the students expressed during the year was that they enjoyed getting to know the student teachers. The teaching techniques were said to have been both good and bad, but what can be expected from an experimental situation. The student teachers on these two pages express their feelings about teaching here.

(above left) Craig Prough, "Totally unique and exciting experience that I've thoroughly enjoyed." (above right) Larry McCloskey, "I had mixed emotions about coming here and I have mixed emotions about leaving. I feel that this school can be a truly great facility if the students and staff will let it be."

(left) Joan Sewell, "Compared to the high school I went to it's in another century." (below) Andrea Roberts, "It's chaotic sometimes, but it's neat because of the people."

(above) Craig Swallow, "I taught the 'whole' thing!"

Williamson, Dale and Meredith Execute Programs

Dr. Larry Dale from OSU and Dr. Glen Meredith from OCE were primarily involved with student teachers and helped them gain a valuable teaching experience.

Dr. John Williamson, after spending the past two years at John Adams High School in Portland now spends a half day at Teaching Research in Monmouth and the other half day at Crescent Valley. Williamson works with staff members in planning and executing programs at CVHS.

CVHS Receives Rachael Carson Grant

Crescent Valley received a grant to incorporate the philosophies of Rachael Carson into the high school curriculum.

Jack Whitney and Tom Tanner were the heads of the program, and under their leadership, some classes at Crescent Valley included the project to a great extent, while others just touched upon it.

(above) Jack Whitney's first and fifth periods science classes leave for another exciting field trip. (left) Gerald Limbrick tests water as part of the close survey of the creek. The information will go into a manual which will be produced next summer with money from the grant.

Humanities Program Inter-Disciplinary

Humanities was the first area to go on the interdisciplinary program at CVHS. Thomas house teachers were incorporated into the "team" situations to relate the two subjects of English and Social Studies.

Robinson's Classes Specialize in Pottery and Jewelry Making

In the Art classes this year, the students have been given more responsibility with their work. The students assembled several of their own potter's wheels and mixed and tested their own glazes.

Thomas Science Taught by Whitney and Spletstoser

Jack Whitney and Wayne Spletstoser taught in the Thomas House this year. Both were dealing in the sciences. Whitney taught Human Ecology, Marine Biology, and Science and Society. Spletstoser worked with three periods of Conceptual Chemistry.

Individualized Math Programs Instituted At Crescent Valley

Crescent Valley's continuous learning math program provides the student to move at his own rate through the course. A number of students completed a year's sequence in a little over a semester and started on the next level.

Auto Shop and Home Ec Go Coed

The Home Ec. classes included males this year. During the year they learned elements of food advertising by touring Richeys' market. Cooking once a week, they learned ways to prepare meats and budget foods. The Auto Shop rebuilt motors. One included a 1941 auto. Many cars were worked on during the school year in the auto shop facilities.

Business Students Learn Accounting and Typing

Thomas business included typing and accounting. They were taught by Diana Glenn. Mrs. Glenn was the advisor for the Rally Squad in addition to her regular schedule of classes.

(below and bottom right) Diana Glenn, business teacher, is shown in two of the areas her classes took place. Standing before the class in the typing room, she gave instructions, handled timings, and conducted the lesson for the day. Crescent Valley P.E. Classes Have Unusual Format

This year's P.E. classes were organized into three week sessions to cover the entire semester course. Many unique choices were offered to the students. These included fishing, riflery, outdoor archery, and weight training. They also had the usual activities such as football, basketball, volleyball, etc., however, most classes were co educational.

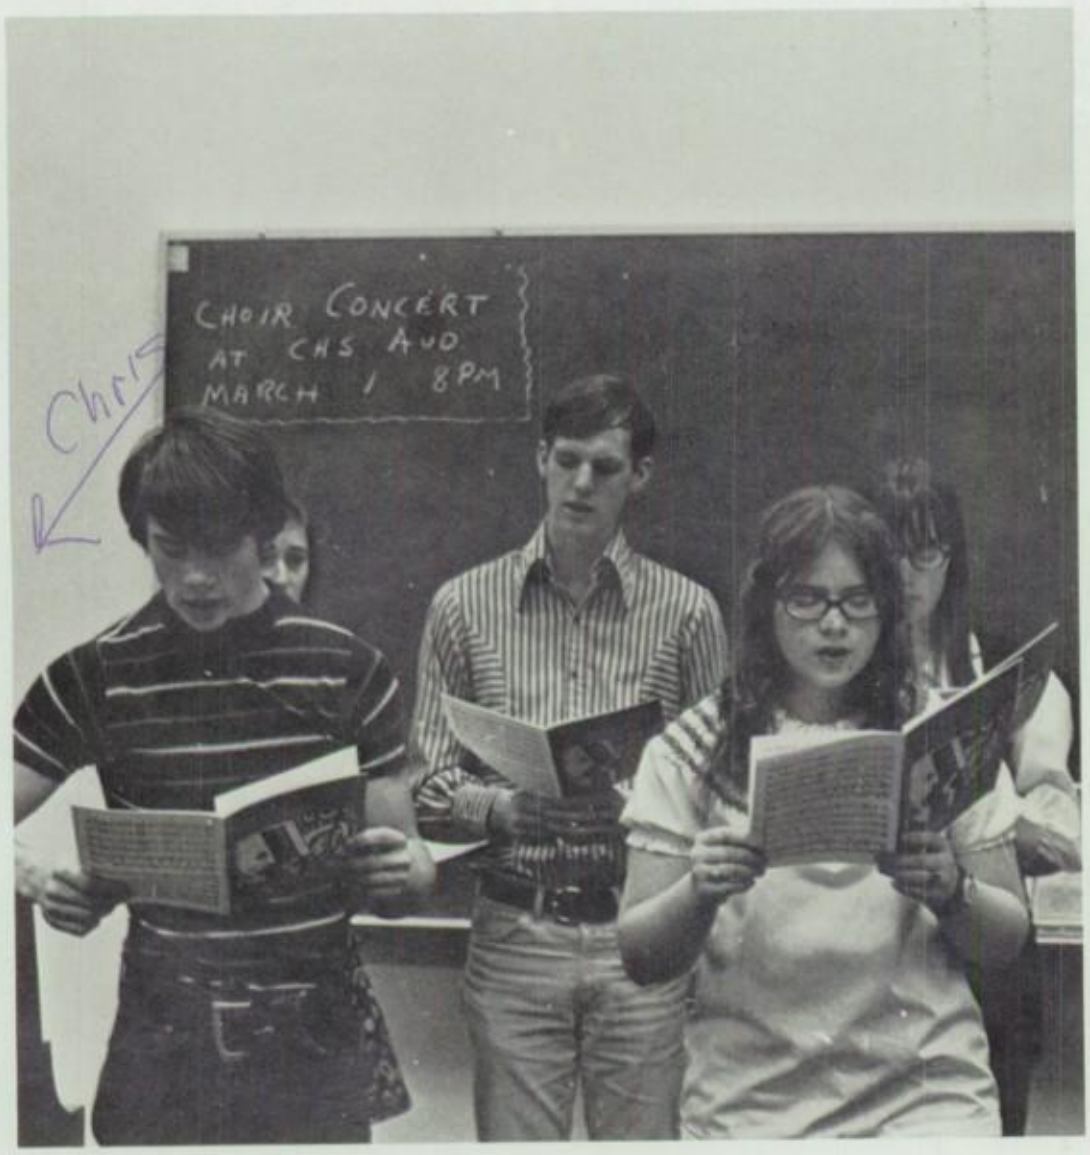
(left) OSU student teacher, Dave Blackford, shows off the marvelous dexterity of his middle finger as he twirls a basketball for the benefit of his admiring audience. Blackford took over some first semester classes in the P.E. department. (below) Coach Patty Ramsdell sips a cup of coffee at the Fall Sports Banquet. Miss Ramsdell coached girl's sports all year round.

Concert Choir And Orchestra Have Limited Personnel . . .

The high school orchestra consisted of all the string players from CHS and CVHS, and select wind players from both schools. The group gave several concerts this year, performing many fine pieces of musical literature. These included Symphony No. 38, W.A. Mozart; Slavonic Dance, A. Dvorak; and Concerto Grosso, G.F. Handel.

(Right) Galen Crisler, orchestra director, plays with the CVHS orchestra. Mr. Crisler only conducted at the concerts and combined rehearsals, as the eight string players didn't need a director during the class period. (Below) The orchestra rehearses in the Fine Arts Wing. First violins are (from l to r) Galen Crisler, Rune Borgir, and Tom Schaeffer. Second violins-Kristan Burkert, Carrie Werth, and Dan Wienman. Viola-Rainard Rachele. Cellos-Ann Grabe and Carol Goddard.

Dirk,
You're a real sweet kid and I hope you become a gymnastics star someday!
Have a nice summer.
See you,
Jeris



Combine With CHS for Performances

The choir had approximately 35 vocalists this year. Under the direction of Joseph Lobbato, the combined Concert Choirs of CHS and CVHS presented several concerts. The choirs were combined to increse the power of the two groups.

You're a riot— I got when I heard you & Sue with that water. I cracked up— You were always trying to get in trouble in World Culture. You really added some class to our History class. Too bad you weren't here all year. Wendy
See ya around sometime.
